

CHAPTER 5

Competitive Procurement Methods

5.1 Overview of Competitive Methods

RCW 39.29, “Personal Service Contracts”, requires that personal services be competitively procured, with few exceptions. Competition is to be open, fair and objective and should be conducted carefully to ensure those aims are achieved. The following chart provides an outline of competitive methods used to procure personal services depending upon the estimated dollar amount of the proposed contract. Please refer to the sections in this chapter for more detailed information on the requirements for competition in each dollar range.

DOLLAR THRESHOLD	COMPETITIVE PROCESS	PERSONAL SERVICES COMPETITIVE PROCUREMENT - MAJOR ACTIVITIES
$1 - $4,999	Not Required	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Seeking competition is always recommended, though not required for this dollar range.• Telephone calls can be made to firms or individuals, describing the services desired and requesting price, schedule and qualifications to perform.• Written contract is entered into upon selection of contractor, regardless of dollar amount.• Sign contract and begin work.
$ 5,000 - $19,999	Informal Competition-- also called “Evidence of Competition”	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Prepare written document/letter including, at a minimum: description of services required, project schedule, request for consultant's qualifications, request for costs or fees and due date for responses.• Send to a minimum of three firms/individuals. May be faxed or e-mailed and responses may be faxed or e-mailed back to agency to expedite processing.• Evaluate responses and make award decision.• Negotiate contract.• Document for file: names of firms solicited; copy of solicitation document; copy of bids received; basis for award decision; copy of contract.• Sign contract and begin work.

GUIDE TO PERSONAL SERVICE CONTRACTING

DOLLAR THRESHOLD	COMPETITIVE PROCESS	PERSONAL SERVICES COMPETITIVE PROCUREMENT - MAJOR ACTIVITIES
$20,000 or more	Formal Competition	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Prepare formal solicitation document, e.g., Request for Proposals (RFP) or Request for Qualifications/Quotations (RFQQ). Include all requirements in order for proposers to understand what the agency needs and how the agency will evaluate responses. • Publish legal notice in major daily newspaper in Washington State to notify firms of upcoming solicitation. Develop mailing list from firms responding to notice, internal agency listings, etc. • Post solicitation document on agency website (optional). • Develop score sheets for use by evaluators. • Issue RFP or RFQQ to a minimum of 6 firms/businesses. Agencies may also just send a notification to 6 or more businesses that the solicitation document is posted on their web site and can be accessed there. (NOTE: New requirement to send to a minimum of 6 effective 7/1/04.) • Conduct pre-proposal conference, if required in RFP or RFQQ, and issue minutes. • Provide answers to bidders' questions via an addendum to all who receive the RFP or RFQQ. Or advise those who download the RFP or RFQQ from the web site to check back for any addenda that may be posted. • Date and time stamp proposals received by the due date. Electronic proposals will have the date and time automatically noted. • Evaluate proposals strictly against criteria set forth in the RFP or RFQQ and score. Must use a minimum of 3 evaluators for scoring and score proposals using score sheets. • Schedule and conduct oral interviews of top finalists, if desired. • Determine final scoring and select apparent successful contractor. • Notify successful and unsuccessful firms. • Negotiate contract with apparent successful contractor. • Conduct debriefing conferences with unsuccessful proposers, if requested. • File contract with OFM - (NOTES: 1) Institutions of higher education will need to file only if the contract contains 20K or more in state funds. 2) Competitively bid contracts for management/organizational services (CA), marketing (CG), communication services (CH), employee training (CJ), and employee recruiting services (CK), are subject to approval by OFM and the ten-working day filing period before the contractor can begin work. Other competitively awarded categories of contracts may be effective the date filed with OFM and work may begin then.) • Sign contract, contingent upon OFM approval for those contracts subject to OFM approval, and begin contract work.

5.2 Number of Consultants to Solicit

Proposals are to be solicited from a reasonable number of consultants. A "reasonable" number is a judgment call, and is determined by the characteristics of the procurement, i.e. complexity, cost, number of available qualified consultants. Enough consultants should be solicited to assure fair and open competition and to increase the likelihood of receiving a number of responsive proposals. Often less than half of the firms that receive a solicitation document actually respond, so it is advisable to distribute solicitations broadly.

When using the informal competitive process called "evidence of competition," for contracts ranging from $5,000 to $19,999, a minimum of three firms must be contacted. If fewer firms are contacted, written documentation must be prepared and maintained by the agency that explains why more firms were not contacted.

When using formal competition for procurements of $20,000 or more, a minimum of six firms must be directly contacted. Agencies must document if fewer than six firms were directly contacted regarding the solicitation. You must advertise for contract services in this dollar range as one method of acquiring names of interested firms. However, you may also contact other agencies and review professional publications and telephone books for consultant names. For many types of services, availability of firms is much higher than six and distribution of the solicitation should be made far more broadly. All who request a copy of the solicitation document must be sent or issued one.

5.3 Informal Competition – Evidence of Competition

For personal service contracts estimated to be $5,000 or greater but less than $20,000, the agency may use the informal procurement process known as "evidence of competition."

GUIDE TO PERSONAL SERVICE CONTRACTING

At a minimum, evidence of competition includes the following steps:

Informal competition is used for personal services of less than $20,000. It's faster than formal competition but still requires a fair, impartial evaluation and written documentation of the process.

1. Locate the names and addresses of multiple firms or individuals that would be qualified to provide the service. "Multiple firms" is defined as a reasonable number of consultants considering such factors as time, cost and availability of qualified consultants. In most instances, this means at least three consultants; however, more are encouraged. In the event less than three firms are contacted, an explanation must be placed in the file to document why more firms were not notified. Agencies should seek participation from certified minority- and women-owned firms by including them on any bidder list as well. If you need assistance locating names, you may contact the Office of Minority and Women's Business Enterprises at (360) 753-9693 or at their web site: <http://www.omwbe.wa.gov/>.
2. Prepare and issue a solicitation document. The solicitation document can be in any appropriate written format, such as a "Letter to Request Bids" or e-mail. A sample letter that may be used for Evidence of Competition appears at the end of this section. At a minimum, the document should include a description of the type of service required, the proposed project schedule, a request for information on the consultant's qualifications, a request for the consultant's cost or fees, and the due date, time and location to submit responses. The solicitation can be sent electronically, by facsimile or through the mail. This informal competitive process is intended to be expeditious; however, agencies should provide enough time for firms to submit complete responses.
3. Document the time and date written responses are received. If the responses are forwarded electronically or by facsimile, the date and time are automatically noted.
4. Evaluate the responses (including costs or fees) and determine which consultant's proposal most closely meets the requirements of the solicitation. Enter into contract negotiations with the top finalist.
5. Prepare the contract document and acquire signatures of both parties.

COMPETITIVE PROCUREMENT METHODS

6. Thoroughly document the entire selection and award process. Prepare auditable documentation of the competitive process and maintain it in the contract file. Such documentation should include: the names of the firms contacted and/or solicited; a copy of the solicitation document; copy of the bids received; an explanation of the evaluation and basis for the award decision; evaluation process used; and a copy of the contract.
7. Report the contract to OFM in the Personal Service Contract Database (PSCD). Contracts valued between $5,000 and $19,999, which have been awarded under “evidence of competition” are not required to be filed with OFM, but are subject to reporting per OFM requirements. (See Chapter 4 for more detailed information on the filing and reporting requirements.)

EVIDENCE OF COMPETITION - INFORMAL SOLICITATION

Any requests for information about this project are to be directed to the Project Manager named above.

Thank you for considering this solicitation.

NOTE: Many other provisions may be included in the evidence of competition letter as appropriate.

5.4 Formal Competition – Request for Proposals and Request for Qualifications and Quotations

5.4.1 Advertisement Required

Personal service contracts estimated to be $20,000 or more are subject to formal competition. As part of that process, agencies are required to publish a notice of the solicitation in a statewide daily newspaper. Newspapers that satisfy this requirement include the Daily Journal of Commerce, the Seattle Times, Seattle Post Intelligencer, The News Tribune and the Wall Street Journal.

Agencies may also post the procurement on an agency Internet website or advertise in a professional publication to increase awareness of the procurement. These steps augment the mandatory publication in a statewide newspaper requirement, but cannot be used in lieu of the newspaper publication. Agencies are encouraged to contact the Office of Minority and Women Owned Business Enterprises and use bidder's lists to increase participation. The agency must contact multiple firms directly in writing, either through electronic mail, regular mail or similar means, to satisfy the requirement of direct notification to consultants regarding the solicitation.

5.4.2 Issue Formal Solicitation Document

Another requirement is issuance of a Request for Proposals (RFP) or other formal solicitation document. The RFP is the procurement document most frequently used in state government to procure personal services. This document not only serves as the basis for the consultants to respond but, as importantly, serves as the foundation for the eventual contract. A well-written, well-considered RFP will help ensure responsive proposals and positive results. The RFP must provide clear, unambiguous statements of project goals and objectives with enough specificity for potential proposers to understand what the agency needs and wants, instructions for submitting the proposals and criteria for proposal evaluation.

The competitive solicitation document or notification regarding the document must be issued or sent directly to multiple firms or businesses. "Multiple" firms means a reasonable number of consultants depending on the type of services being solicited.

Six or more firms or businesses must be contacted as part of this formal competitive process. If fewer than six firms or businesses are known or available, documentation is to be placed in the file as to how the agency came to that conclusion.

5.4.3 Elements of an RFP

Primary information to include in an RFP is explained below:

Project Background and Scope of Work—Provide sufficient information on the background of the project, specific problem or need, the primary objectives and scope of work to ensure proposers understand what is needed and can submit viable proposals.

The scope of work looks for results—it is performance oriented, not process oriented. While the scope of work must be communicated as comprehensively as is feasible, it must also allow the consultant latitude in describing how the results will be achieved. The statement of work tells "what" must be done, the consultant responds with "how" to do it.

It is important to emphasize that performance requirements must be results-oriented. Results-oriented performance is the basis for determining, later in the contract administration process, whether the agency is receiving the quality service for which it is paying. One way to ensure successful outcomes is to break each major task down into smaller components or performance measures. This can serve as an incremental approach to building a performance based contract.

The language in the project scope of work should be simple and direct. The scope of work will be read very carefully and scrutinized by prospective proposers in preparation of their offers. Use the words "will" or "must" to indicate that a future specific action is required to be done. The consultant is instructed to do or not to do something in a way that is active rather than passive. The term "shall" has been deemed by some as meaning "may". Therefore, it is preferable to use the terms "will" or "must".

Definitions—Definitions should be included for all special terms and phrases used within the RFP. The definitions must clearly establish what is meant, in order to avoid misunderstanding on the part of the reader.

State's Role—State-furnished facilities, equipment, information and services, if any, must be clearly stated, as the responses of prospective proposers may be contingent upon what the agency furnishes. If the agency will charge the contractor for use of equipment or facilities, that information needs to be conveyed in the procurement document.

Funding—Budgetary constraints usually exist on any state project. The agency determines whether to disclose in the RFP the amount of available funds allocated to the project. Provided the RFP is well written and thoroughly descriptive of the project, the consultant should be able to determine a reasonable level for fees.

Some agencies include the funding information in the RFP as standard practice. Prospective contractors can more readily assess the scope of the project by looking at this maximum value. Knowing the project budget assists consultants in deciding what course to take in developing methodology. However, consultants will likely bid the contract at or just below that price.

Minimum Qualifications of Proposers— Minimum qualifications are determined by the state agency and program based on requirements applicable to the contracted service. Such qualifications may include:

- Experience providing the service.
- Staff credentials and expertise.
- Capabilities to meet service delivery, program management, and contract administration requirements.
- Other special requirements such as the ability to provide culturally relevant services, in languages other than English when necessary; physical presence or capacity to deliver services in specific geographic locations; and other qualifications necessary to perform the contract according to agency specifications.

Project Schedule—Agencies should include realistic dates for project completion. Consultants should be expected to design methodology in keeping with the real needs of the agency rather than to design for an artificial time frame. In some instances an agency may want to include only critical dates and let the proposer suggest the actual work schedule.

COMPETITIVE PROCUREMENT METHODS

Other elements that are frequently included in the RFP are:

- Identification of an RFP Coordinator as the sole contact person.
- Complete instructions for submitting proposals and due dates for responses.
- Mode and frequency of consultant reporting to agency management under the contract.
- Method and schedule of contract payment.
- Notice of option to extend contract performance, if applicable.
- Notice of option to amend the contract if additional funds become available.
- Insurance requirements.
- Ownership of final product.
- Criteria for evaluating proposals.
- Copy of a sample personal service contract.
- Copy of agency's general terms and conditions for contracting.
- Debriefing procedure.
- Public disclosure requirements.
- Protest procedures established by the agency.
- Applicable exhibits.
- Certifications and Assurances.

Sample RFP Format—Please refer to Appendix C for a sample Request for Proposals. The terms in this sample represent a fairly standard approach to a solicitation document.

Other RFP Elements—RFPs may include many provisions appropriate to the project, which are not included in the sample RFP, Appendix C. Some RFPs require the proposer to respond with a “Letter of Intent to Bid,” which provides the agency an estimate of the number of responses to expect. RFPs may require that the proposers be assigned bidder codes in order that a “blind” evaluation may be conducted. These and many other requirements may be included in an agency's solicitation document. The agency should determine the value of these requirements and that should be included in the final RFP.

5.4.4 Typical RFP Schedule

The following sample schedule of sequential, primary activities of an RFP process is provided as a guide in developing your procurement schedule. A complex procurement can take much longer, but a simple procurement could be accomplished in less time.

COMPETITIVE PROCUREMENT METHODS

<ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Develop a detailed need statement. 2. Draft the RFP. 3. Coordinate review of the draft RFP with agency staff. 4. Develop a schedule for the RFP. 5. Make arrangements for the pre-proposal conference (used for more complex procurements). 6. Prepare legal notice of forthcoming RFP and publish in newspaper(s). 7. Post on website(s) as desired. 8. Compile mailing list. 9. Complete final RFP document. 10. Select RFP evaluators. 11. Draft scoring sheets to be used by evaluators. 	Weeks 1 – 2

Make award decision. 20. Obtain internal agency review and approvals for award. 21. Announce apparent successful contractor. 22. Notify unsuccessful proposers. 	Weeks 7 – 8
<ol style="list-style-type: none"> 23. Negotiate contract. 24. Conduct debriefing conferences, if requested. 25. Conduct bid protest review, if required. 26. Finalize contract document. 	Weeks 9 – 10
<ol style="list-style-type: none"> 27. File contract, if required, with OFM. Ten working days filing period is required for management consulting/organizational services (CA), marketing (CG), communication service (CH), employee training (CJ), recruiting services (CK). Other categories of contracts may be effective the date filed with OFM. 28. Sign contract and begin work. 	Weeks 11 - 12

5.4.5 Proposal Preparation and Submission Instructions

The RFP should contain instructions on how to prepare the proposal. Specifying a standardized format for responses will ease evaluation by the agency. Consultants should understand that failure to follow prescribed requirements and to submit requested information may result in rejection of the proposal as non-responsive.

RFPs often require that proposals be divided into three major sections with the following information:

Technical Proposal – What is to be Done and How?

The technical proposal should contain an explanation of how the consultant plans to approach and conduct the work and the steps to be taken to successfully complete it.

Consultants are to demonstrate that they understand both the magnitude and the importance of all elements of the work, and their proposal should present a clear plan to accomplish the work. Consultants must be advised that a mere repetition of information from the project scope of work section will not be considered responsive to the RFP.

Management Proposal – Who is to Do the Work and Under What Terms?

The management proposal should contain information on the consultant's organization, proposed team structure and internal controls, and relevant experience, both in general work and in projects similar to the subject of the RFP.

Knowledge of past performance of a contractor can enable state agencies to predict the quality of and agency satisfaction with future work. Coordinating with other state agencies may be one way to obtain this information. References, monitoring reports, audit reports, or evaluations are potential resources to aid examination of prior performance.

Aspects of past performance that may be taken into account include:

- Quality of work/services, including compliance with contract requirements.

COMPETITIVE PROCUREMENT METHODS

- Timeliness of performance, such as adherence and responsiveness to contract schedules.
- Cost controls, including staying within budget, and providing accurate and complete billings.
- Business practices and key personnel performance, including the performance record of the organization and its key staff.
- Effective working relations between the contractor and the agency.
- Customer satisfaction.
- Previous contract(s) terminated for default.

The proposal should also identify the contract manager and state the names of the staff to be assigned to the project, their functions and a detailed résumé for each.

The management proposal should emphasize staff commitment to the project. It may include the number of hours or percentage of time key personnel will devote to it. An organizational chart showing the responsibility of key project staff members may be requested. If references were requested in the RFP, they will be included here. Any subcontractor information is also included in this section. If the firm is a certified minority and/or women-owned business, proof of certification is included as well.

Cost Proposal – How Much Will it Cost?

The cost proposal should contain the following information as applicable:

- Maximum cost for the entire project broken down by activities, tasks, outcomes, phases or deliverables as appropriate to the project.
- Cost or pricing details. Rates often include all overhead and profit, unless requested otherwise.
- Estimated periodic billing to the agency based on the cost of the deliverable items.
- Any subcontract costs.
- Travel, lodging and other direct expenses, if allowable.

If requested, the proposer should supply a recent financial report or bank references for evaluation of financial responsibility.

5.4.6 Timeline for Responses

Many factors determine the amount of time between issuing the solicitation document and the due date for responses. Generally, consultants should be given enough time to prepare a thorough and comprehensive response. Four weeks from issuance of the solicitation is a reasonable time for consultants to prepare responses under most circumstances. The absolute minimum is two weeks, i.e., 10 working days, in the case of a simple project or a genuinely urgent situation.

If the timeline is too restrictive on a major procurement, the agency risks reducing both the quality and the quantity of proposals submitted. Consultants may not have the opportunity to assemble the best management team or to prepare a comprehensive technical proposal when unrealistic response dates are set. In some instances, qualified consultants may not bid if they think an unrealistic timeframe is being imposed or worse, they think the competition is not being conducted fairly.

If a pre-proposal conference is scheduled, it should be convened no later than two weeks after issuing the procurement document. This allows the agency time to prepare and distribute the information provided at the pre-proposal conference, which is then issued as an addendum to the Request for Proposals. The due date for responses would normally be two weeks after the pre-proposal conference.

5.4.7 Evaluation Criteria

Detailed evaluation criteria should be included in the RFP. The evaluation criteria must be consistent with the RFP. To use the point score method, evaluation criteria are individually weighted with a point value relative to the item's importance to project success.

COMPETITIVE PROCUREMENT METHODS

The following types of evaluation criteria, not listed in order of significance, are often used to evaluate proposals. Each would be incorporated as a scored RFP element:

- Proposer's understanding of the project.
- Proposer's project approach and methodology.
- Quality of project work plan (technical proposal).
- Feasibility of the proposed schedule.
- Description of proposed deliverables.
- Project management and internal controls.
- Firm's and staff ability, capacity, and qualifications.
- Firm's relevant experience.
- Business references.
- Project cost.

Avoid vague or subjective evaluation criteria. The proposal evaluation scoring sheet, including specific criteria and the weighting or point value of each, is to be developed prior to issuing the solicitation document. Attached, as Appendix D, is an example of an evaluation scoring sheet. More detailed questions specific to the project would often be included in an agency's scoring sheet depending upon the nature and complexity of the project. The critical point is that the scoring sheet reflects the requirements stated in the RFP.

5.5 Another Type of Formal Procurement Document

A Request for Qualifications and Quotations (RFQQ) is a more streamlined procurement document that may be used when the project scope and associated tasks are well defined. The objective of an RFQQ is to select the firm most qualified to perform the work defined in the RFQQ at a competitive price.

The process is similar to that used for a Request for Proposals, but is less comprehensive, since a technical proposal or work plan is not being requested from the proposers.

The evaluation is limited to an analysis of the firm's qualifications, experience and ability to perform the specified services and their costs. The weighting of these factors is contingent upon agency need. The RFQQ is to be issued to six or more firms or individuals to ensure that open and fair competition is achieved per Section 5.4.4 of the Guide. Advertising is required when the project is estimated to be $20,000 or more (see Section 3.3 for more detail). The Request for Proposals sample included as Appendix C can be used as the framework for an RFQQ by deleting the requirement for a technical proposal.

5.6 Competitive Solicitation - Variation

Agencies have occasionally indicated an interest in issuing competitive solicitations for personal services that allow other agencies to purchase from their contracts. If an agency is interested in this arrangement, the Request for Proposals (RFP) or Request for Qualifications and Quotations (RFQQ) must clearly state this intent. Proposers must understand the potential quantity of services that may be demanded in order to respond with a viable proposal.

The awarding agency is responsible to comply with all the terms of the RFP or RFQQ and the contract. The agency awards the contract specifying the scope of work, maximum contract amount and rates for services, period of performance, etc., and files the contract with OFM. Task orders may be negotiated and issued as approved among the awarding agency, the contractor and the agency for which services will be provided. Any amendments to the contract are filed by the awarding agency. As with all other contracts, the scope of services must be consistent with the description in the solicitation. Scope creep is not permissible.

In some instances, agencies have needed personal services on a short turnaround basis and have competitively awarded multiple contracts for a specific service, e.g., land appraisals. The contracts are awarded with a scope of work, period of performance, fees and maximum dollar value. However, work is not authorized until a task order is executed specifying the detailed scope of work, duration and cost for the task order.

Based on the dollar amount, the contracts are filed with OFM, but the individual task orders are not. If the contract is formally amended to add dollars, scope or time, the amendment is filed with OFM. It is vital that agencies maintain the validity of the process by establishing a fair and impartial process up front by which task orders will be assigned to the qualified firms. Selection of a capable contract manager will be essential in ensuring successful management of a task order contract.

5.7 Unsolicited Proposals

An agency may occasionally receive a proposal that has not been asked for or solicited. The consultant in that instance is initiating the procurement process and is endeavoring to provide a service that he/she perceives the agency needs.

Agency staff should review the offer and make a determination whether it is feasible or potentially beneficial. If the service is deemed unnecessary or inappropriate by the agency, the proposal may be rejected. Written notice should be provided to the proposer of the agency's decision. If the service is deemed beneficial or necessary, a competitive procurement must be conducted. A case may be made for sole source procurement only if the service is determined to be unique or highly specialized.
